NIGHTFALL.

Lie still, O heart!
Crush out thy vainless and unreached desires.
Mark how the sunset fires,
Which kindle all the west with red and gold,
Are slumbering 'neath the amethystine glow
Of the receding day, whose tale is told,
Stay, stay thy questionings; what would'st thou know,
O anxious heart!

Soft is the air;
And not a leaflet rustles to the ground
To break the calm around.
Creep, little wakeful heart, into thy nest;
The world is full of flowers even yet,
Close fast thy dewy eyes, and be at rest,
Pour out thy plaints at day, if thou must fret;
Day is for care.

Now turn to God,
Night is too beautiful for us to cling
To selfish sorrowing.
O memory! the grass is ever green
Above thy grave; but we have brighter things
Than thou hast ever claimed or known, I ween,
Day is for tears At night the soul hath wings
To leave the sod.

The thought of night,
That comes to us like breath of primrose time,
that comes like the sweet rhyme
Of a pure thought expressed, lulls all our fears,
And stirs the angel that is in us—night,
Which is a sermon to the soul that hears.
Hush! for the heavens with starlets are alight,
Thank God for night!

BEHIND HER FAN.

Behind her fan of downy fluff,
Sewed on soft satin saffron stuff,
With peacock feathers, purple-eyed.
Caught daintily on either side,
The gay coquette displays a puff.

Two blue eyes peep above the bluff;
Two pinky pouting lips—enough,
That cough means surely come and hide
Behind her fan.

The bark of Hope is trim and tough,
So out I venture on the rough,
Uncertain sea of girlish pride,
A breeze I'll track against the tide,
Capture a kiss and get a cuff,
Behind her fan.

SELECT STORY.

HIS FIRST PATIENT.

BY FRANK H. STAUFFER.

Dr. Paul Ventnor sat alone in his office, his hands crossed on his knees, his eyes fixed upon vacancy, the light from the side-jet falling upon his worn, anxious face.

The room was barely comfortable. The floor was covered with matting. The wall paper was shabby, but was cheerfully relieved by a few cheap, yet brightly colored, chromos, and the heavily gilt frame which inclosed his diploma. A desk somewhat littered, a book-case but partially filled, an old fashioned sofa, and a few stuffed, stiff-backed chairs, were all the furniture visible. We say visible, because within a small, curtained alcove, were a low, narrow bedstead, and a dingy toilet stand, in keeping with the cracked wash-bowl and pitcher which surmounted it, and with the rickety towel-rack which stood beside it.

The doctor was quite a young man, prepossessing in appearance, and positive in his manner—his grave, thoughtful face indicating character and a fair degree of reserved strength. His cloths had a seedy look; they were entire, but much worn, frayed around the button holes, the faded binding rendered less noticeable by the application of ink.

In fact, the doctor was very poor, and the out look for the future was in no wise encouraging. He had been located in that quarter of the city for three months, and yet had not received a single professional call. He had spent his means, and had been compelled to pawn his surgical instruments and a few of his books; he was in arrears for boarding, while the landlord had given him notice to vacate the room.

The doctor was not to blame for his straightened circumstances. He had practiced rigid economy; he had nailed up his sign and distributed his circulars; he was at least theoretically well up in his profession; his address was in his favor, he had patiently waited. There was not much sickness in the neighborhood, and what little patronage there was went into the hands of the older practitioners. No wonder that the young doctor's attitude was a forlorn one, and the expression on his face almost devoid of hope.

Suddenly his countenance brightened. Some one had pulled the bell. Who else, if not a patient? He opened the door, and a lady entered. She was closely veiled, and yet he knew that she was young, because of the elasticity in her movements.

"You are Dr Ventnor?" she asked, her voice sweet and distinct, though slightly tremulous.

"At your service, madam," he answered, with a polite bow. "Pray, be seated"

She took the chair which he placed for her, and removed her veil; and as she did so, he noticed that her hand was small, white, shapely and bejewelled. Her face was exceedingly fair, though it wore a troubled look. Her eyes were black and lustrous. They made a rapid survey of the room, and then rested upon the doctor's face in such a steady, calculating, estimating way, that he felt the blood filling his cheeks.

"I wish you to call upon my father," she said.

"To-night?" asked the doctor.

"Well—no," she debatingly answered. "To-morrow will do. I tell you beforehand, it's an odd case, and a bad one. If you succeed in relieving him you have only to name your fee."

"What is his malady?" asked the doctor.

"He's a hypocondriac," she slowly, half-unwillingly admitted, the color coming and going in her face. "He has a strange hallucination, and if he is not lifted out of it it will end in his death."

The doctor was becoming fascinated with the sweet voice, the graceful gestures, the black eyes, which grew more lustrous because anxiety had filled them with tears. He drew his chair nearer to her own.

"You have consulted other physicians?" he asked.

"Quite a number," she replied, a little flurriedly. "Some of the best in the city."

"Without success?"

"Oh, of course;" and she spoke with impatience. "They had no—no—intentions. They argued, and—hooted"

There was something charming about those pauses in the choice of words.

"You think they should have humored him?" the doctor asked.

"Yes!" she answered, her face brightening wondrously. "You have caught the idea. Oh, sir, I believe that you can cure him."

In her excited eagerness, she unconsciously laid her hand on his arm, and the touch thrilled him.

"Why did you come to me?" he asked. "I am young—inexperienced—unknown."

"Why?" she inquired, with a searching look "I do not know. Why do we do queer things?" and she smiled a little oddly. "They come to us like a—a—revelation."

It was an ambiguous explanation, and yet he understood her.

"Perhaps the other physicians were too old, and knew too much," she added, the odd smile again stirring her lips.

"I will do what I can," the doctor gravely said. "What is the character of the hallucination?"

"It is concerning his food," she slowly replied, the piquancy dying out of her face. "Or, to be precise, it concerns what is given him to drink. For days at a time nothing liquid passes his lips. Oh, it is just dreadful!"

"There are rational intervals?" the doctor asked.

"Yes, thank God!" she exclaimed, with sweet fervor; "otherwise he would be in his grave."

"He fancies the water to be poisoned, eh?"

"Oh, worse!" cried the lovely visitor. "Filled with the finest needles."

"Ah!" ejaculated Dr. Ventnor. He was thoughtful for a minute—then added: "Give me your address. I'll call to-morrow."

She handed him a card upon which was printed:

G. B. BRANSON,
No.—, Walnut Street, Philadelphia.

The doctor knew the gentleman by reputation; he felt sure that there was a heavy fee in prospect.

"You will be sure to come?" his visitor asked, with a delightful tremor in her voice.

She arose, and dropped her veil over her face, her diamond rings catching a thousand sparkles of light.

"Without fail," was the doctor's answer, as he accompanied her to the door. "Is your father in distress now?"

"Very much so, sir."

They had reached the doorstep. It was so early in the evening yet, that she was not in need of an escort.

"One thing more, Miss Branson," he said. "It may be best for me not to call as a physician."

"Why not?" asked she, in quiet surprise.

"He may be prejudiced," replied the doctor. "Probably you have not caught my meaning. A great deal will depend upon adroitness. Could I not come upon some pretended business? Of a kind in which he takes an interest?"

She bent her head, and he noticed how finely poised it was.

"He has houses to rent on Brandywine street," she said, after a pause. "To rent and to sell."

"Very good," rejoined the doctor, "that will serve me. Now Miss Branson, you must not be surprised if I cut up some queer antics." He laughted as he said that. "Watch me closely for a clew to what I would have you do or say."

He felt that she was keenly regarding him, in the dimness, through her veil.

"I think I understand," she simply said. "Good evening, sir."

The next morning Dr. Paul Ventnor took from a drawer a strong horse shoe magnet. He rubbed steadily upon the blade of his pocket-knife with one of the poles of the magnet, thoroughly electrifying it. He purchased a paper of very fine needles at an adjoining store; then set out for the residence of his patient.

He found the latter to be a man well advanced in life, intelligent and genial—so genial, in fact, that the doctor wondered at their being so much of the suspectful in his nature.

The room was magnificently furnished, yet without a violation of harmony or taste. The owner was evidently a man of wealth, disposed to consult his ease.

The doctor at once opened a conversation about the houses on Brandywine street, in which Mr. Branson earnestly joined, and vividly explained points in the speculation.

"Sir, could I trouble you for a drink of water?" the doctor suddenly asked.

"Certainly," replied the other. "Kate, please bring Mr. ——?"

"Ventnor," supplied the doctor.

"A glass of water," completed Mr. Branson.

He was addressing his daughter, who had called upon the doctor the evening before, and she was seated in one of the bay windows. She put aside her book, left the room, and returned with a glass of water, which the doctor accepted with a bow

He was more impressed with her loveliness than ever, now that he had a better view of her. Her hair was black and abundant, her air dignified, her manner royal; she was un-loubtedly an intelligent, refined, sensible, pure minded young woman.

No glance of recognition passed between them—at least her father did not notice any; but the doctor saw a waiting, wistful, trustful, anticipating look in her eyes, which made his pulses throb faster.

He raised the glass to his lips, and then a well feigned look of astonishment crossed his face. He ejected some of the water, plucked at his mustache, then strode to the window, where he seemed absorbed in an examination of the contents of the glass.

"What is the matter?" asked Mr. Branson.

"Matter!" sharply repeated the doctor, as he turned from the window. "Sir, who is this girl?" he sternely asked.

"Girl!" exclaimed Mr. Branson, with a frown. "She is my daughter."

"I beg a thousand pardons!" humbly rejoined the doctor, seeming quite flurried. "This is remarkable! Very remarkable!" and he stared into the glass.

"What is remarkable?" asked Mr. Branson, with a gasp.

"There are needles swimming in the water," announced the doctor, the nonplused look still on his face. "Hundreds of them, sir! How did they get in? Why did she bring me such stuff as this?"

"Needles!" exclaimed Mr. Branson, becoming very much excited. "There, Kate!" he added, with an air of triumph, "What have I always told you?"

Miss Branson stared into the tumbler, her face comically demure.

"I see no needles," she said.

"Oh, you don't, eh?" sarcastically rejoined the doctor. "What do you say, Mr. Branson?" and he handed the old gentleman the glass.

"You are right, sir," declared he; "I see them with the naked eye; and my sight is none of the best, for I am almost seventy. But you cannot convince her."

"May be I can," objected the doctor.

He took out his knife, thrust into the glass the magnetized blade, and when he withdrew it a number of needles were adhering to it, for he had adroitly dropped them into the water.

"What have you to say now?" he asked, his eyes upon Kate.

"I am convinced," she said. "Why, it is just horrible!"

The doctor turned to Mr. Branson, and said:

"You do not seem greatly surprised?"

"Well, no," replied the old gentleman, with a grin, "it is no new experience to me. For months I have found needles in the water, milk, tea, coffee—in everything served up to me to drink. I cannot begin to tell you what I have suffered I called in several physicians, but they laughed at me, and treated it as the fancy of a disordered mind. You are the only person who ever detected the needles, and I know you had no hint of the matter from me or anybody else. I shall ever hold you in grateful remembrance, if for no other reason than because you have convinced my daughter. She will believe, with me, that a diabolical and systematical attempt has been made upon my life."

"On mine, sir, in this instance," grimly rejoined the doctor. "It is an outrageous affair, and must be looked into. Who filled this glass?"

"Richard," replied Miss Branson.

"Who is Richard?" asked the doctor.

"A domestic."

"Send him here at once!" peremptorily ordered the doctor.

Mr. Branson stared with admiration at his visitor; he was a man of nerve, of purpose and of promptness; he would surely unravel the mystery.

"This man Richard," the doctor asked, "is he a colored man?"

"A mulatto."

"Compos mentis?"

"A trifle simple-minded, I suspect."

"How long has he been with you?"

"Three years."

"Ah!" ejaculated the doctor. "He must be sent away at once."

The servant came into the room, preceded by Miss Branson.

"Did you fill this glass with water?" the doctor sharply asked.

"Yes, sah," answered the mulatto, a harmless-looking fellow, with high cheek bones and watery eyes.

"Did you drop any needles into it?" asked the doctor.

"Golly, no!" exclaimed the man. "Dar's no needles in it. It's an old cranky notion of Mr. Branson's. He keeps us all on an edge about it."

"Oh, he does, eh?" frowned the doctor. "Well, it is no fancy."

"Dar's no needles in the water," declared the man.

"We'll, see," said the doctor, as he thrust the magnetized knife blade into the glass. "What are these, pray?" indicating a number of dangling needles.

There was something comical in the way the man's eyes dilated.

"Dey is needles, sah, sure as you live!" he exclaimed. "Dey must jist been in the cooler. I didn't put 'em in; I swear I didn't, sah!"

"Your services here end with to-day!" the doctor sternly said. "If there is any money due you, Mr. Branson will pay it."

A dumb-founded look settled upon the servant's face, and he was about to protest with vehemence, when Mr. Branson sternly seconded the doctor's order.

"I owe you a week's wages, which Kate will pay you at once," he said. "Now go, and be thankful I didn't have you up before a magistrate."

The man bestowed a fierce, angry glance upon the doctor, and then slowly and sullenly left the room.

Mr. Branson and the doctor conversed for an hour upon various topics. The old gentleman was wonderfully pleased with him, and cordial in his invitation to him to call again.

Miss Branson accompanied the doctor to the door.

"Your father is cured," he said.

"Do you think so?" she asked, her handsome eyes on his face. "We will wait a week. That was an admirable ruse. Take this, please; it is simply a remembrance."

A roll of something was placed in his hand.

"Thank you!" he gratefully said.

"You were rather hard on Richard," reminded Miss Branson, with a smile.

"I wronged him," admitted the doctor. But—I had to assail some one. Can you not explain the matter to him, and procure him a situation elsewhere?"

"I will try," she replied.

The doctor bowed, and then hurried back to his office. He paid the debts which annoyed him most, and felt like another man. At the end of the week he received a second voluntary fee from his fair friend.

The tide turned; patients called on him or sent for him; his practice became assured; he was on the high road to competency.

He became a frequent visitor at the house of Mr. Branson, and finally married the fair, dark-eyed young girl who had brought him his first case.—[Oriental Casket.

A Remarkable Scene.

A middle aged man and a 3-year old boy were seen sitting together on a doorstep in Portland, Me., one day last week. The man was smoking a strong pipe and the child was eating bread and molasses. Their relations were evidently of that intimate character which does not impose the necessity of conversation. Neither said a word, but presently the man passed his pipe to the infant, who at once laid down his bread and molasses and began to smoke in the most natural matter-of-fact manner imaginable. Having satisfied his desire for tobacco the 3-year-old handed back the pipe and went on eating bread and molasses.

Cleaness and purity make Parker's Hair Balsam the favorite for restoring the youthful color to gray hair.

How He Played it on the Old Man.

A boy went into a store the other morning, limping, and seemed to be broken up generally. The proprietor asked him if he wouldn't sit down, and he said he couldn't very well, as his back was lame. He seemed discouraged, and the proprietor asked him what was the matter.

"Well," said he, "there is no encouragement for a boy to have any fun nowadays. If a boy tries to play an innocent joke he gets kicked all over the house. You see, my old man is no spring chicken, and though his eyes are not what they used to be, yet he can see a pretty girl further than I can. The other day I wrote a note in a fine hand and addressed it to him, asking him to be on a certain corner at 7:30 on Saturday evening, and signed the name of Daisy to it.

"At supper time pa was all shaved up and had his hair plastered over the bald spot, and he got on some clean cuffs and said he was going to the lodge to initiate some candidates, and he might not be in till late. He didn't eat much supper, and hurried off. I winked at ma, but didn't say anything. At 7:30 I went down town, and he was standing there by the Post Office corner, in a dark place. I went by him and said:

"Hello, pa, what are you doing there?"

"He said he was waiting for a man. I went down street, and pretty soon I went up on the other corner, and he was standing there. You see, he didn't know what corner Daisy was going to be on, and he had to cover the whole four corners. I asked him if he hadn't found his man yet, and he said no, the man was a little late. I went up street, and I saw pa cross over by the drug store, and I could see a girl going by with a waterproof on, but she skited along, and pa looked kind of solemn, the way he does when I ask him for new clothes. I turned and came back, and he was standing there in the doorway, and I said:

"Pa, you will catch cold if you stand round waiting for a man. You go down to the lodge and let me lay for the man.

"Pa said: 'Never you mind; you go about your business and I will attend to the man.'

"Well, when a boy's pa tells him to never mind, my experience is that boy wants to go right away from there, and I went down street. I thought I would cross over and go up the other side, and see how long he would stay. There was a girl or two going up ahead of me, and I see a man hurrying across from the drug store to the other corner. It was pa, and as the girls went along and never looked around, pa looked mad and stepped into the doorway. It was about 8 o'clock then, and pa was tired, and I went up to him and asked him for half a dollar to go to the theatre. I never knew him to shell out so quick. He gave me a dollar, and I told him I would go and get it changed and bring him back the half dollar, but he said I needn't mind the change.

"It is awful mean of a boy that has been treated well to play it on pa that way, and I felt ashamed. As I turned the corner and saw him standing there shivering, waiting for the man, my conscience troubled me, and I told a policeman to go and tell pa that Daisy had been suddenly taken sick and would not be there that evening.

"Well, when I went home the joke was so good I told ma about it, and she was mad. I guess she was mad at me for treating pa that way. I heard pa come home about 11 o'clock, and ma was real kind to him. She told him to warm his feet, 'cause they was just like chunks of ice. Then she asked him how many they initiated in the lodge, and he said six; and then she asked him if they initiated Daisy in the lodge, and then she began to cry.

"In the morning pa took me into the basement and gave me the hardest talking to that I ever had, with a bed slat. He said he knew that I wrote that note all the time, and he thought he would pretend that he was looking for Daisy, just to fool me. But what did he give me that dollar for?

"Ma and pa don't seem to call each other pet names anymore; and as for me, they both look at me as though I was a hard citizen. I am going to Missouri to take Jesse James' place. There is no encouragement for a boy here."

And the boy limped out to separate a couple of dogs that were fighting.—Peck's Sun.

The Colonel, who lives in the South, was finding fault with Bill, one of his hands, for neglect of work, and saying he would have no more preaching about his place—they had to many protracted meetings to attend. "Bill ain't no preacher," says Sam. "He's only a zorter." "Well, what's the difference between a preacher and an exhorter?" "Why, you know, a preacher he takes a tex', and den he done got to stick to it. But a 'zoter—he kin branch."

There are six million miles of fencing in the United States, the total of which has been more than two thousand millions. The census reports show that during the census year there were expended $78,689,000 alone. Of this amount the largest contribution was from Illinois; the second from Pennsylvania.

Jesse James once thought seriously of going through college; but the idea of howling around nights, changing signs, disconnecting telegraph wires, and greasing railroad tracks was so repugnant that he concluded to go West and become a respectable highway man.

LIQUID GOLD.

Dan'l Plank, of Brooklyn, Tioga Co., Pa., describes it thus: "I rode thirty miles for a bottle of Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which effected the wonderful cure of a crooked limb in six applications; it proved worth more than gold to me."

People look upon things very differently and according to circumstances. When a boy who could play baseball longer than he could study arithmetic was asked how he liked his teacher, he replied: "I don't like him at all. Why he does nothing in the world but stand up there and ask us fellows questions all day. One would think he didn't know anything at all.

Incubators.

A year or so ago we were led to inquire whether any incubators were in successful and profitable operation. As we received no response, we suppose that nothing yet of any consequence has been found out of the knowledge that eggs may be hatched by artificial means. We are the more inclined to believe that no practical use has been made of the idea to any extent, from seeing in the schedules of some of our leading poultry exhibitions, handsome premiums offered for successful incubators, while so far as we have been able to see, no reports of anything valuable being offered has appeared. Taking it for granted, therefore Notice to Democrats.

Last day for being assessed and registered—Thursday, September 7th.

Last day for paying taxes—Saturday, October 7th.

Last day for being naturalized—Saturday, October 7th.

During the past month the coinage at the Philadelphia Mint included 800,000 silver dollars, 470,000 pennies and 43,000 five cent pieces, making an aggregiate value of $806.850.

There were 7,000 bills introduced in the House, and 2,500 in the Senate, during the sessions, and if all the profit the country got out of the whole of them, where coal dust, it could be blown into the eye of a mosquito without making him wink.

The registration of medical practitioners in Pennsylvania shows that in round numbers there are 6,500 registered physicians. There are 500 who have not registered. Of those registered 500 are graduates of colleges of the bogus kind and 383 are not graduates of any institution, but are permitted to register because they have been in practice since 1871.

Smooth sailing in Convention on Tuesday! Most of the nominations had been determined at the primary elections, and in perfecting those for Representatives, the Convention followed the indications of the popular vote. Good rules, and fair, prompt transaction of its business, enabled the Convention to adjourn early in the afternoon.

Several brigades of State Militia are now in camp at Lewistown. There has been considerable complaint owing to the scarcity of water and the abundance of snakes. One officer is reported to have killed three rattlesnakes in his tent near his cot. The paper does not state whether they were in his boots.

Lightning got loose in several places last Monday. At Easton, Pa., a house was damaged; in Warren county N. Y. a barn and its contents were destroyed, at Stamford, Conn., the Presbyterian church was totally demolished and at Middletown, N. Y. several buildings were struck. Two lives were lost.

The bill to reduce taxation failed to pass in Congress, and the Republican majority is now accusing the Democrats with its defeat. When the Republican party comes before the country again the failure of the tax bill and the passage of the river and harbor steal will not be the only acts for which they are responsible, that they will endeavor to put on the Democrats. But they will be held strictly to account for their misdeeds.

Nominations for Congress have gone for eight years to Lackawanna and Carbon—toward the eastern side of our Congressional district—and now no candidate heretofore named, (with one possible exception), appears upon the scene, to be injured or offended by the action of this county. But the main and sufficient reason for that action consists in the fitness of the selection made. And this is a case where a man trained to public work and acquainted with public business, can properly be called upon by the people for public service.

It is but reasonable, upon local grounds, that this county should have conceded to it the Congressional nomination; for it has not been represented in the House of Representatives by one of it's own citizens for 35 years. Dr. Leib of Catawissa served for a single term, that is from 1845 to 1847, being the first and only Representative ever selected from the present territory of Columbia county, from the date of the creation of the county at the legislative session of 1812—13. This statement covers a period of 70 years.

Several eminent judges have presided in the Courts of this county within the recollection of men who served in the Convention on Tuesday: Ellis Lewis, John N. Conyngham, Warren J. Woodward and William Elwell. Gen. Anthony of Williamsport, and several judges who held brief terms under appointment, are to be added to complete the list of men who have administered justice in our Courts. But few counties in the State have been equally favored by fortune in the securing excellent judges, and it is a matter upon which the people of the county may well congratulate themselves that the present head of their Courts will continue to serve them in future.

The passage of the river and harbor bill over the President's veto was an outrage that should bring strong condemnation upon the party that effected it. There is strong reason to believe that the President knew what action his party would take in the matter before he vetoed the bill, for he was very careful to inform the Republican leaders in Congress that he would not consider it a slight nor a rebuke if they passed it over his head. It is true that some Democrats voted for its passage, but they were mostly from the South where the money is needed to protect the people from the overflows of the Mississippi and the inroads of the waters of the bays. In Pennsylvania not a Democrat voted for it, and we are glad to record our member, Major Klotz, as being present, and voting against the measure. Republican organs seek to excuse their representatives on the ground that as many Democrats voted for the measure as Republicans. An analysis of the vote, however, fails to bear this out. It is the act of a Republican Congress and they alone must bear the odium.

OUR CANDIDATES.

The ticket placed in nomination on Tuesday last is one that ought to receive the support of every Democrat. Most of the nominees have served the people before and it is unnecessary to speak particularly of them at this time. William Bryson Esq. is a young lawyer of Centralia. He read law with Hon. C. R. Buckalew, has considerable ability, and will no doubt make an excellent representative. John Moury, nominee for Sheriff is a Roaringcreek farmer, of good business qualifications, and he will conduct the business of his office satisfactorily. John P. Hannon and George A. Derr, nominees for Coroner and Jury Commissioner respectively, are gentlemen who are thoroughly qualified for the positions. Of course the whole ticket will be elected by a large majority.

The Cameron Dynasty.

IS "PROPRIETARY" GOVERNMENT TO BE PERPETUATED IN PENNSYLVANIA.

The battle in Pennsylvania is a battle against boss rule, and the spoils system as personified and illustrated by Cameronism. The Democratic State platform declares squarely against both.

"First—We do protest against what is called the boss system and the plundering of office-holders by assessments of money for political purposes. Public offices are the property of no party but are open to every citizen honest, capable and faithful to the constitution, qualifications which Jefferson declared were the requisites for office.

"Second—We protest against the spoils system; it is a prostitution of the offices of the people, so that they become the mere perquisites of the politician."

The people of Pennsylvania are familiar with the history of Cameronism. The denunciation of it has not been confined to the Democracy.

Nearly 20 years ago, William D. Kelley then as now a Republican, and who is the oldest Congressman in the Pennsylvania delegation wrote: "No stone may mark the spot where my poor remains may finally rest, but I mean that my children shall be able to vindicate my name by pointing to the fact that Simon Cameron and his confidential friend were ever hostile to me."

In 1867 when Simon Cameron was nominated for the United States Senate by the Republican members of the Pennsylvania legislature, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, owned and published on the same direction under which it is now the chief Stalwart organ in the city said:

"It is disgraceful that a man whose power and influence are avowedly due to his wealth, should be made Senator when such men as Stephens, Curtin, Grow, Kelley and a score of others, distinguished for talent, intergrity and faithful service, were in the field. But the mischief is done and cannot now be repaired. There is no hope for anything beyond 'white washing' will be done by the committee appointed to investigate the rumors of bribery."

When the elder Cameron advanced in years he sought to perpetuate the rule of his family by transferring the political power of Pennsylvania to his son, who was without either experience in or capacity for public affairs. How this transfer was viewed by the people of the state may be inferred from the following editorial comments of that conservative journal, the Ledger, on the following day:

"Word was sent out from Harrisburg yesterday of a nature calculated to puzzle those old-fashioned folk who supposed that 'Proprietary Government' had come to an end in 1786. It is to the effect that the representation of the state in the Senate of the United States is to be transferred from Cameron, senior, to Cameron, junior—by virtue of some amicable family arrangement, it may be supposed. Whether the title to succession is to be transferred by deed or gift, or by last will and testament, or by any other of the well-known modes of conveyance and inheritance is not made known in the dispatches. The members of the legislature are, of course, expected to vote, in order to comply with the forms. Theoretically, the representation of Pennsylvania in the Senate of the United States is supposed to involve the civil and the political right of all the people of the commonwealth. In a party point of view at this time it nearly concerns the honor and manhood of the whole Republican constituency of the state: practically, however, if the above mentioned report be true, it would look as if those very agreeable gentlemen, the Camerons, regard the matter as if the principal interest in it attaches to themselves, and the docile members of the legislature are doubtless expected to take the same view. If there shall be occasion for any balloting on the subject we shall have a chance to find out whether the 'Proprietary-Government' really ended a hundred years ago, or is continuing in full vigor in our own day."

The Ledger and the rest of the state soon discovered that the "Proprietary Government" continued in its full vigor. The younger Cameron was elected United States Senator simply because the elder Cameron decreed it.

Months after that, when the burst of indignation which followed this event had subsided and men measured their words. Benjamin Harrison Brewster, now the representative of Pennsylvania Republicanism in Arthur's Cabinet said:

"Last winter our people were shocked with the election of J. Donald Cameron, the irresponsible son of a Senator of whom I will not speak, because he and his acts have become a part of public history and must be measured with more deliberation than can be given in a casual conversation like this—a son that has neither mind, attainment, dignity of character, knowledge of public affairs, party services or personal worth to warrant his advancement, and who has no record but a bad one as an intriguer and manager of bad men. He was first forced into the War Department as the price of his offer to betray his state and renominate General Grant, and after being there he was so base born in his notions of decency and gentlehood as to solicit and urge, by all the mean arts of political contrivance, that he should be retained as the companion of Cabinet officers and gentlemen who dont want him. Failing in that, by the coarse brute force of organized power he jostled his old father out of his place and thrust himself into a Senate where he will be an object of derision and disgust. The public are sick of those odious men, and the public will do away with them. We have destroyed human bondage in the South; we will next break down political bondage in the North and South."

The people in Pennsylvania are making an effort to free themselves from political bondage. Don Cameron purposes to perpetuate it by the election of his man for Governor. When Beaver was not his man he was beaten for the nomination. In the convention of 1878 Beaver had no show. In 1880 he went to the Chicago convention as a delegate. He was instructed for Blaine. His constituents were for Blaine. But he pleased Cameron by "his offer to betray his state and renominate General Grant." After he had thus proved himself a "Stalwart of Stalwarts" Cameron said "Boys we'll go home and make Jim Governor of Pennsylvania." The election of Beaver means the continuation of "Proprietary Government" in Pennsylvania—with Don Cameron as proprietor.

Since October 1, 1881, to August, 1882, there have been sold in Petersburg, Va., 5,118,640 pounds of loose tobacco at the average price of six cents. The sales have been much heavier than for the same period last year.

The Democratic Duty.

THE IMPORTANT MATTERS TO BE ATTENDED TO AT ONCE.

The assessors have received copies of the registry, and the books are or ought to be hung up, as provided by law, against the doors and windows of the voting places in the different districts. Now that the book is exposed for public inspection, every voter will have the opportunity to see that his own name and those of his friends are on the lists or are properly entered, so that any person whose name is not found in the books when he wants to pay his tax, or at the election in November, can have no one but himself to blame for the pain of losing, or the trouble of proving, his right to vote. If any of the books should happen to disappear, citizens can readily ascertain the address of the assessor, in case any corrections or additions are necessary.

County committeemen, sub-committeemen and every Democrat who desires to aid the efficient organization of the party will do well to observe these points and ACT PROMPTLY:

1st. Always remember that success depends upon getting out every Democratic vote. AND THAT YOUR WORK LIES IN YOUR DISTRICT.

2d. Your first duty is to MAKE A COMPLETE CANVASS OF YOUR DISTRICT, and have on your book the name of every voter, marked as to politics.

3d. Then on your small books the name of every Democrat in each sub-district, so that each sub-committeeman will know whom to look after, and will get every Democrat registered.

4th. See that every man is registered, not later than the first day of September. Especially look after young men who voted on age last fall, as they must now be assessed and pay taxes.

5th. Carefully hunt up all young Democrats who vote on age for the first time this year and place them on your list.

6th. Make a careful canvass of parties to be naturalized, and have them be rought in during September, while Court is in session. Be sure to have such registered in time.

State Post Offices.

Pennsylvania has a larger number of postoffices than any other state in the Union. The number is 3,589, as against 3,364 two years ago; an increase of 225. No one has a keener perception of this fact than the postal men who have to commit these offices to memory when learning the distribution of mails for the state. The Presidental offices now number 150. Of the first class there are only two—Philadelphia which receives $4,000, the largest salary under the law, and Pittsburg, which will now receive $3,900, an advance of $300.

There are three grades, the first class being those which have a salary attached of more than three thousand dollars; the second class run from two to three thousand dollars, and the third class from one thousand to two thousand dollars. The fourth class, comprising the great majority of offices, is that below the thousand dollar standard, which is the point of entrance to the Presidential grade. These latter are appointed by the postmaster general. This is the system under which the postmasters of the country are classified. The whole country contains 46,159 postoffices, and they are being added to at the rate of quite two thousand a year. There are now 2,025 Presidential offices as against 1,764 two years ago at the last adjustment. This is an increase of 261.

Under the readjustment of offices and salaries just made, Harrisburg, which has been all along of the first grade, goes back to second place, with an allowance of $2,700 a year. The second class number thirty. Bethleham, Norristown and Petrolia fall back to the third class. The heaviest single increase is in the case of Braddock, which goes from $600 to $1,103, entering the Presidential rank. Waynesburg also enters the same grade, with the same salary, with the next heaviest increase of $400. The reductions of salary in Pennsylvania are notable, particularly in the oil regions. Petrolia goes down $500, the former salary being an even $2,000. Oil City loses $400, and Norristown. Harrisburg and Titusville each loses $300. There are three reductions of $200 each, Bethlehem, Sunbury and West Chester. Kittanning, Parker's Landing and Tidioute go down $100 The following add $300 to the annual salary: Berwick, Brownsville, Corry, Kandall Creek, Mount Joy, Newport, Pittsburg, Renovo, Reynoldsville.

The pastors of the Methodist Episcopal churches of York Pa., publish a card giving their reasons for refusing to attend "so-called Methodist camp meetings." Many of these enterprises, they say, are not under the control of any department of the Church, and are managed by grossly immoral men, who use money to bribe uneducated consciences, and obtain this money by collusion with railroad corporations. "We are in favor of camp meetings," the clergymen add, "whenever it can be demonstrated that their influence is more helpful than hurtful to the cause of Christ."

At a meeting of the republican state committee at Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, it was decided to hold the state convention at Saratoga on September 20.

The right of a woman past the age of 21 to marry whom she pleases has just been vindicated in Missouri. The father of Laura Robbs, aged 27, attempted to hold her to continued service in the paternal home by locking her up in a room when she had made a verbal contract to become the wife of George W. Bishop. A writ of habeas corpus unlocked the door, and then the marriage took place in spite of the father's objections.

A Cincinatti physician says that diarrhœa and summer complaint can be cured by exposing water in a blue bottle to the sun for a half hour or upward, and then giving one or two teaspoonfuls each hour until symptoms change. Water thus affected by the sun he declares to be a great nervine and refrigerant as well as an astringent.

On Thursday of last week while Barnum's show was about to be transferred from Troy, N. Y. to Gloversville, one large elephant, Emperor, followed by three others, became unruly and rushed through the streets of Troy. They were attracted by the bright lights in the Renselaer Rail Mill and entered it, causing a stampede among the employees. In the confusion Emperor stepped into the hot blooms and burned his feet terribly. Being maddened by the pain he rushed out of the mill and soon got on the main street where he took revenge on everything that came in his way. Several persons were caught and hurled in the air, or dashed against some building, and many were seriously injured. It was not until eight o'clock the next morning that they could get him under control. $4.000 damages were paid.

The Campaign Columbian.

We will send the COLUMBIAN to any address in the county, from now until after the fall election for 30 cents. As this will be an unusually interesting campaign every Democratic voter should take a paper and keep himself posted. There is not a man in the county who cannot afford to take the COLUMBIAN at that price, and we hope to receive many orders. Postage stamps can be sent by mail.

The Benton Band will have a new uniform soon.

The new five dollar bank notes it is said will contain a portrait of the late President Garfield.

The Espy Cornet Band will hold a festival in Espy Park on Friday and Saturday evenings of next week, August 18th and 19th. Several bands will be present. A good time is expected.

I expect snowfall will be recorded in extreme western and northwestern sections and cold rains at more southerly stations shortly after the middle of the month."

The Standing committee met upon the adjournment of the Convention and elected Robert Buckingham Chairman, and C. A. Kleim Secretary. No better selection could have been made as both are active and energetic gentlemen, and they will no doubt look after the interests of the party zealously.

Most of the candidates who were defeated for nomination to county offices were gentlemen who would have given satisfaction if they had been chosen. As politics is a lottery in which some must draw blanks, those who were the unlucky ones this time will no doubt pocket their defeat gracefully, and cheerfully lend their assistance this fall in piling up a big majority for state and county ticket.

There will be a letting for a bridge over Cole's creek in Sugarloaf township near Alinas Cole's mill, at the Commissioners office on Monday August 21st, at one o'clock. As the county commissioners have seen fit to put the advertisement in two papers that have no circulation in Sugarloaf township, we insert this notice gratuitously for the benefit of the residents of that portion of the county.

M. M. Hilliard's circus and menagerie was in this place on Saturday last. Quite a large crowd was attracted. The verdict seemed to be that it was a pretty good show for Bloomsburg, especially as it was only the second show that has ventured to pitch its tent here. Bloomsburg citizens are not much as circus goers, and the travelling troupes are indifferent about stopping. Hilliard's show was as advertised, a pretty good twenty-five cent show. One half of their animals were lions.

Last Saturday afternoon J. F. Caldwell's horse which was standing in front of the bake house on Centre street, hitched to the wagon and untied, started off on a little excursion of his own, and delivered the bread box and its contents in front of Billmeyer's store, badly damaging the box. The wagon turned over in making the corner, and the horse broke loose from it, but was caught at the Exchange Hotel. At this time of year when flies are so annoying, horses should not be left untied.

An effort was made on Tuesday morning to secure the election of county commissioner Charles Reichart as chairman of the standing committee, but failed, and Robert Buckingham was elected by a vote of 12 to 7. It has always been the practice to select the chairman from the county seat, and as Mr. Reichart resides in Main township, it was considered unwise to make a change at this time. Mr. Buckingham has all the necessary qualifications for an efficient officer.

Farmer's and property owners should bear in mind that they are required by law to cut Canada thistles on their properties before they go to seed. For a neglect to comply with this law they are subject to "a fine of fifteen dollars, one half to be paid to the county treasurer, and the other half to the use of the person suing for the same." Any persons considering themselves aggrieved by the neglect or refusal of the property owner to cut the Canada thistle may enter upon the premises, cut down the thistles and recover from the owner of the property compensation for his services at the rate of two dollars per day.

Anna E. Kressler, aged 29 years, committed suicide by hanging herself to an apple tree early on Tuesday morning. She resided between Bloomsburg and Lightstreet. Her sister, who was sleeping with her, missed her about four o'clock in the morning, and upon going to look for her, found her hanging to the tree. She was a daughter of George Kressler, who was insane for many years, one brother is now in the Danville Asylum and another brother died some years ago, who was insane. While her mind was not permanently affected, she had at times acted strangely. An inquest was held by J. H. Maize, Esq., on Tuesday morning and the verdict of the jury was that she committed suicide while laboring under a temporary fit of insanity.

Carl Zerrahn, Conductor of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston, and one of the Leaders of the Great Musical Peace Jubilees of Boston in 1869 and 1872 has this to say about the Treasury of Song. "It gives me great pleasure to state that I have looked through Treasury of Song, and examined the Index of the same. It contains a great variety of musical matter from the classical to the most popular, and, in recommending it to the public, I cannot do better than to repeat the words from its title page, that the different pieces are 'chosen expressly for their eminent fitness to promote happiness in every home.'"

Mr. J. P. Owen is now canvassing the town for this book, and lovers of music should by all means secure a copy.

McNarra, a swindler from Belfast, Ireland, has been traveling through this state defrauding clergymen by false representations. His method was to represent himself as a member of the same denomination as the clergyman he called on, and then by telling a very plausible story, to borrow money from him "for a few days." In his peregrinations he struck Bloomsburg, and calling on Rev. L. Zahner, stated that he was a member of the church of England, that he had but recently arrived in this country, and came to Scranton to visit his brother. Upon arriving there he found his brother had gone to Tyrone, this state, and as he had only money enough to bring him to Bloomsburg he concluded to stop off here and borrow sufficient to carry him through, when he would return the money. He asked Mr. Zahner for twenty-five dollars, but got nothing as Mr. Z's suspicions were aroused. He then went to Rev. Dr. Mitchell's where he represented himself as a Presbyterian and gave a different name. Not long ago he was arrested in Northampton county and is now in jail at Easton, for practicing the same game. He will be convicted, and if all the clergymen whom he has swindled throughout the state should appear to testify against him it will probably be a good many years before he dupes another one.

A Wicked Tramp.

A fellow who gives his name as James Conner was lodged in jail on Wednesday morning on the charge of attempting to commit a felonious assault. The facts of the case are as follows: On the 1st day of August W. J. Bidleman of Montour township employed a man to help in harvesting oats. Mr. Bidleman has four daughters who all slept in a room together, and a room was given the man in another part of the house. Some time after midnight one of the daughters was aroused from sleep by a queer sensation and the impression that there was some one in the room besides her sisters. On looking around she saw a man, and gave an alarm which brought her father to their assistance. As the man left he asked the girls to excuse him as he had got in the wrong room, Mr. B. was so alarmed at the screams of the girls that he rushed into the room without stopping to look after the man. The man went to his room and dressed and disappeared. In the morning a bottle of chloroform was found near one of the beds and some of it had evidently been administered to one of the girls, but not sufficient to render her unconscious and hence the intention of the villain was frustrated. Search had been made for him but without success until Tuesday when it was discovered that he was in Centre township. Accordingly constable Woodward and chief Freas were dispatched at twelve o'clock at night, and they succeeded in capturing the fellow in the barn of Elisha Hagenbuch near Hidlay's church. He was lodged in jail, and on Wednesday morning had a hearing before J. H. Maize, Esq., who committed him in default of $500 bail. This is one of the boldest as well as one of the most heinous attempts that a man could make. He deserves to be punished to the fullest extent of the law and undoubtedly he will receive it.

F. P. Billmeyer read the following resolution which was adopted:

Resolved. That Cyrus B. McHenry of Fishingcreek, David Lowenberg of Bloomsburg and John C. Yocum of Catawissa be the conferees for this county to meet in district conference to nominate a candidate for Representative in Congress with instructions to support C. R. Buckalew and with power to depute or substitute other Conferees to serve in their stead.

Mr. Beishline stated that he was authorized to withdraw the name of Isaac Gibbons as candidate for the Legislature. Instructions were then read off by the reading clerk resulting on the first ballot as follows:

Dewitt	25	Gibbons	5
Vanderslice	40½	Fox	12
Hamlin	18	Bryson	33½

SECOND BALLOT.

Dewitt	26½	Bryson	41½
Vanderslice	46½	Hamlin	20

T. J. Vanderslice having received more than 45 votes was declared duly nominated.

THIRD BALLOT.

Bryson	43½	Hamlin	10 5-6
Dewitt	12½

Mr. Bryson was declared nominated.

Mr. Billmeyer read the following resolution:

Resolved: That this Convention strongly condemns the lavish appropriation of public money by Congress, made at the late session, and also the keeping up of war taxes in time of peace, and heartily approve the course of Hon. Robert Klotz, our Representative in Congress, in opposing the River and Harbor bill and sustaining the President's veto thereon.

The instructions for Sheriff were read with the following result:

Moury	37	Wolf	8
Swank	22

Mr. Moury having received more than a majority of votes was declared nominated for Sheriff.

John P. Hannon and D. R. Coffman were named for the office of Coroner. A ballot was taken and Hannon was nominated.

W. A. Kile named John A. Kline, for Jury commissioner, and C. W. Sterner named George A. Derr. Derr was chosen as nominee.

R. D. Darlington offered the following resolution:

WHEREAS the Democratic State Convention recently held at Harrisburg adopted new rules for the government of the party, which rules provide that after January 1st 1883, the State Central Committee shall consist of one member from each county, to be elected under the rules of the local organization, therefore

Be it Resolved: That the said member of the State Central Committee for Columbia county be elected each year at the Democratic County Convention, and the person receiving a majority of all the votes cast shall be declared elected.

Geo. E. Elwell was elected member of the State Central Committee, and the Convention adjourned. The meeting passed off quietly. Owing to the fact that many farmers are busy getting in their oats, and the extreme heat, there were not as many people in town as usual.

The delegate election in town last Saturday, was largely attended and hotly contested. The fight seemed to be warmer on committeemen than on candidates. In the east ward Robert Buckingham and G. A. Herring were the candidates for standing committee and Mr. Buckingham was elected by a vote of 140 to 89. The general feeling seemed to be that Mr. Herring who was Deputy county treasurer, President of the town council, chairman of the county committee, and delegate to the state convention, had been the recipient of about as many honors as it was necessary to bestow on one man at one time. In the west ward the contest for committeeman was between C. A. Kleim and W. J. Buckalew, Mr. Kleim being elected by a majority of 20 votes. He was a member last year, and filled the position of Secretary of standing committee very satisfactorily, and has been reappointed to the same position this year.

A number of foreigners, with nine bears, and several poor horses and ponies passed through town on Thursday of last week. They were the most wretched looking party of human beings that ever made their appearance in this section. There were half dozen women and fourteen children, the latter being carried either in bags hung across the saddles or at the mother's back. Though their chief business seemed to be begging, they had quite an amount of money, and applied at the banks to get bills for small change. The party were said to be Sclavonians and have been in this country but a short time. They have been driven out of many places, because of the rumors that there was small pox in the party. Some of them spoke French and German besides their own tongue. They were perfect specimens of pure and unadulterated Bulgarian gypsies, whose chief virtue is never to allow their bodies to come in contact with soap and water.

Useful Recipes

JELLIED VEAL.—Cover a knuckle of veal with water, add a small onion and a carrot, and let it boil until the meat is ready to fall off the bone. Take the meat and chop it fine, and return it to the liquor after it is strained, give it another boil, add a little cayenne, salt, the juice and grated rind of a lemon. Then pour into a form. Let it stand in a cool place until it jellies. This is a nice dish for lunch or tea.

PEACHES AND CREAM.—Pare and cut up in small pieces some ripe and juicy peaches. Sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar. Beat the white of four eggs to a stiff froth, then beat in gradually one-quarter of a pound of powdered sugar, stir in the fruit, place in a mould and surround with ice. When thoroughly chilled turn out and serve immediately with some sweetened and flavored rich cream.

OAT MEAL GRIDDLE CAKES.—Mix in a pan a cup and a half of Canadian oat meal, two cups of water, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, a little salt, half a teaspoonful of carbonate of soda; beat thoroughly together; let stand over night. In the morning beat two eggs, to which add a cup of milk, and flour enough to make it of the consistency of buckwheat batter. Bake on a hot griddle. Time for baking, two or three minutes.

TROUT A LA FLORENTIN.—Take a large trout, clean it well by the gills, stuff it with butter, parsley, pepper and salt. Cook it in a fish kettle, with enough good white wine to cover the fish, add a crust of bread, a few rounds of an onion, three or four cloves, a little nutmeg, pepper and salt. Cook over a clear fire so that the wine catches fire, and when the flames diminishes, add butter mixed with flour. Place the fish on a platter, strain the sauce through a sieve and pour over the fish. Serve hot.

OAT MEAL PORRIDGE.—One heaping cupful of oat meal to one quart of water, and one teaspoonful of salt. The water should be salted and boiling when the meal is sprinkled in with one hand while it is lightly stirred in with the other. When all mixed it should boil without afterward being stirred more than is necessary to keep it from burning at the bottom, and to mingle the grains two or three times. If too much stirred the porridge will be starchy and poor in flavor. But the puffing of the steam through the grains without much stirring, swells each one separately, and when done, the porridge is light and quite consistent. Boil half an hour.

FISH A LA CREME.—Boil either bass or cod with plenty of salt, flake it, removing all the skin and bones, put a quart of milk or cream in a milk boiler. While boiling add one onion, a little celery root, some chopped parsley, stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour, mixed perfectly smooth with a little cold milk. When boiled, take out the vegetables, add a quarter of a pound of butter to the cream. Butter a deep dish, put in a layer of fish, then a layer of sauce, continue this until the dish is full, making the final layer of the sauce. Sprinkle sifted bread crumbs and a trifle of grated cheese over the top. Bake half an hour. Varnish with parsley and slices of hard-boiled eggs.

CHOCOLATE FRUIT ICE CREAM.—Put one and a half pints of rich milk on the fire to scald, flavor with a teaspoonful of vanilla powder. When the milk is well scalded, remove from the fire, and when cool stir into it the well-beaten yolks of six eggs and half a pound of sugar. Set the custard pan into a vessel of boiling water, stir the mixture until it has slightly thickened. Take four ounces of baker's chocolate, add to it two or three table spoonfuls of boiling water. Stir it over the fire until perfectly smooth. Add this and a half a teacupful of thin dissolved gelatine to the hot custard. Cool the custard well before putting it into the freezer, as this saves time and ice. When it is in the freezer stir it almost constantly until it begins to set, then stir in lightly a pint of whipped cream. When the custard is partly frozen add the fruit—a quart of ripe peaches cut in small pieces, or fresh ripe berries.

ROSES FROM CUTTINGS.—European horticulturists have lately adopted a mode of making rose cuttings root with more certainty, by bending the shoot, and inserting both ends into the ground, leaving a single bud uncovered at the middle, and on the surface of the ground. The cuttings are about ten inches long, and are bent over a stick laid flat on the ground, holes being dug on each side of the stick for the reception of the ends of the shoot. The roots form only at the lower end of the shoot, but the other end, being burned, prevents evaporation and drying up. A correspondent of the London Garden states that he has tried this, along with the old mode, and that, while the weaker cuttings of the latter have shown symptoms of drying and failure, all the former have grown vigorously.

FRUIT FRAPEES.—Line a mould with vanilla ice cream, fill the centre with fresh berries or fruit cut in slices, cover with ice cream, cover closely and set in freezer for half an hour, with salt and ice well packed around it. The fruit must be chilled, but not frozen. Strawberries and ripe peaches are delicious thus prepared.

Harvesting and Selling.

SELF BINDING REAPERS.—The great crop of grain throughout the country this season, together with the unusual demand for labor, caused great call for machinery to aid the harvesters. Those who had many acres to harvest, found a profit in buying a self binder. Many with much smaller harvest purchase machines, and harvest for others to make them profitable. The usual price is $1.50 per acre, the farmer finding the twine, and setting up the bundles. The cost of the twine offsets the board of the extra binders that would be needed if no self-binding machine were used. If one could be sure of having the work done when needed, it would be cheaper for a small farmer to hire than to buy a machine. But the loss of grain from not cutting as soon as ready is often several dollars per acre. This is especially true of barley, which, if not cut quite green, is apt to be light and of poor quality.

There is another argument in favor of labor-saving machinery, in the fact that often when help is needed it cannot be had at any price.

WHEN TO SELL PRODUCE.—The farmer is often advised to hold on to his crops to gain better prices. Sometimes the better prices are to be had, but then it does not always follow that it has paid to keep back the articles. There has been the care and cost of keep, perhaps to the hindrance of other work. Then there is the shrinkage to be allowed for, and this is always considerable. Wheat from the time it is thrashed will shrink two quarts to the bushel, or, six per cent, in six months, in the most favorable circumstances. Hence, it follows that 94 cents a bushel for wheat when first thrashed in August, is as good, taking into account the shrinkage alone, as $1 in the following February.

Corn shrinks much more from the time it is husked. One hundred bushels of ears, as they come from the field in November, will be reduced to not far from eighty. So that 40 cents a bushel for corn in the ear, as it comes from the field, is as good as 50 cents in March, shrinkage only being taken into account.

In the case of potatoes taking those that rot and otherwise left—together with the shrinkage, there's but little doubt that between October and June the loss to the owner who holds them is not less than 33 per cent.

This estimate is taken on the basis of interest at seven per cent., and takes no account of loss by vermin.—Tribune & Farmer.

Soils for Fruit.

All trees and plants are not partial to the same character of soil, and though they may live for a few years in uncongenial ground, certain varieties will never reach their greatest perfection unless their roots are thoroughly adapted to the soil in which they are placed. We may change the character of some soils, as, for instance, a wet, retentive clay by systematic underdraining, etc., but it is a difficult matter to convert a pure sandy soil into a stiff, adhesive mould. Now, this partiality to special soils extends even to varities of the same species of fruit, as, for instance the strawberry. The Triomphe de Grand, Jucunda and some otehrs will attain perfection only in heavy soils, while the Kentucky and many other are specially adapted to the light sands of portions of New Jersey and Dcleware. The pear, in particular, is very partial to a strong, rather heavy soil; and the apple, plum and quince, succeed best in one of a similar character. On the other hand, cherries and peaches seem to succeed better on a thoroughly drained, open frigable loam, with little, if any clay.

Moisture is an essential to success in the cultivation of quinces, strawberries and some exceptional varieties of other fruits, as the Newtown pippin apple. Grapes delight in a moist atmosphere, and their roots will ramble a long distance in search of water. For these moisture loving varieties a good mulch during the summer has been found highly advantegeous, and nothing is better for the purpose than long strawy manure. Says Dowing: "A pretty careful observation for several years has convinced us that a light, sandy soil is, on the whole, the worst soil for fruit trees." This leads us back to a former statement that most fruit will survive for a few years at least and prove reasonably remunerative on very light soils; but perfection can only be obtained on a heavier loam, according to the requirements of each important species. Another point is, that although fruits, as a rule, are partial to stimulating fertilizers in the soil, the cherry will not thrive in very rich land, or, at least, a very few years will be the extent of its existence.—New York Tribune.

Budding Plums.

Budding is a very simple operation, which can be done at any time when the bark "peels" readily and the buds are sufficiently ripened—say from the middle of July to the last of September. Take a well developed single bud, cut off the leaf, leaving enough of the stalk to take hold of when inserting the bud. With a sharp knife cut off the bud, with a thin slice of bark and wood, commencing, say a third of an inch above the bud and ending the cut about as far below it, so that the hole forms a straight smooth cut; then make a cross cut through the bark of the stalk in a smooth place, and also a longitudinal one, so that the hole has the shape of a Roman cross about an inch long. Now raise the bark of the stock with the knife or with an ivory, and push down the bud under the bark until the upper end is even with the cross of the stock. Now wrap the hole firmly and smoothly with basswood bark or woolen thread, leaving the bud out to prevent smothering, but closing all the bark tightly below and above. In about two weeks the bandage may be taken off, and if the bud is fresh and green, it has taken and the stock should be cut off an inch above it next spring, and only the bud allowed to grow.—Rural World.

Nervousness, debility, and exhausted vitality cured by using Brown's Iron Bitters.

A good idea: An Irish gentleman, hearing of a friend having a stone coffin made for himself, exclaimed: "Be me sowl, an' that's a good idea! Shure, an' a stone coffin 'ud last a man a life time.

THE PUREST AND BEST.

Remedy Ever Made.—It is Compounded from Hops, Malt, Buchu, Mandrake, and Dandelion.

The oldest, best, most renowned and valuable medicine in the world, and in addition it contains all the best and most affective curative properties of all other remedies, being the greatest liver regulator, blood purifier, and life and health restoring agent on earth.

It gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To clergymen, lawyers, literary men, ladies, and all whom sedentary employments cause irregularities of the Blood, Stomach, Bowels, or Kidneys, or who require an appetizer, tonic and mild stimulant, it is invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, without being intoxicating.

No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, or what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable use the bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing, at a moderate cost. Ask your druggist or physican. Do not suffer yourself or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.

If you have lameness in the loins, with frequent pains and aches; numbness of the thigh; scanty, painful and frequent discharge of urine, filled with pus, and which will turn red by standing; a voracious appetite and unquenchable thirst; harsh and dry skin; clammy tongue, often darkly furred; swollen and inflamed gums; dropsical swelling of the limbs; frequent attacks of hiccough; inability to void the urine, and great fatigue in attempting it—you are suffering from some form of Kidney or Urinary Complaint, such as Bright's Disease of the kidneys, stone or inflammation of the bladder, gravel and renal calculi, diabetes, stranguary stricture and retention of the urine, and Hop Bitters is the only remedy that will permanently cure you.

Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the purest and best medicine ever made, and no person or family should be without it.

Don't risk any of the highly lauded stuff with testimonials of great cures, but ask your neighbor, druggist, pastor or physicians what Hop Bitters has and can do for you and test it. Aug.

A NOTED BUT UNTITLED WOMAN.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Mrs. Pinkham.

The above is a good likeness of Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., who allows all the human beings may be truthfully called the "Dear Friend of Women," a sense of her correspondents love to call her. She is said to be devoted to her work, which is the outcome of a life study, and is obliged to keep six lady assistants to help her answer the large correspondence which daily comes to them, each bearing its special burden of sickness, or joy at release from it. Her Vegetable Compound is a medicine for good and not evil purposes. I have personally investigated it and am satisfied of the truth of this.

On account of its proven merits, it is recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country. Our space will not allow us to publish a tithe of the testimonials we have in our possession, but we will say that it will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, Irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life.

It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach. It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

It costs only $1, per bottle or six for $5, and is sold by druggists. Any advice required as to special cases, and the names of many who have been restored to perfect health by the use of the above Compound, can be obtained by addressing Mrs. P., with stamp for reply, at her home in Lynn, Mass.

For Kidney Complaint of either sex this compound is unsurpassed as abundant testimonials show.

"Mrs. Pinkham's Liver Pills," says one writer, "are the best in the world for the cure of Constipation, Biliousness and Torpidity of the liver. Her Blood Purifier works wonders in its special line and bids fair to equal the Compound in its popularity.

All must respect her as an Angel of Mercy whose sole ambition is to do good to others.
